Local Agency Wins International Web Site Award

Willow Creative Group launched their new site in the fall of 2007. Following the launch, the agency enjoyed a flood of positive feedback from clients and friends around the city and a boom of new business. Recognition from the design industry continued through last month, when Willow received an international award of distinction from the Communicator Awards for their site.

The Communicator Awards is one of the leading international awards programs honoring creative excellence for communications professionals. This year's competition received over 8,500 entries from companies and agencies of all sizes, making it one of the largest awards of its kind in the world. The Communicator Awards are sanctioned and judged by the International Academy of the Visual Arts.
